

Hello Chuck,

I am writing in response to your "one on one" contest. I have been a member for about six months. I am embarrassed to say that I have not accomplished much of anything. I have been reading comments on the forum, have listened to some of the pre-recorded teleconferences and even joined in one live teleconference. I admit that most of what I hear goes over my head. I really want to learn this business and succeed in it. I love that you are very honest and you seem to genuinely want to help people to succeed. You even seem to go out of your way to make things easier for us and to make sure those with questions get an answer. Your willing to help others with this business is the only reason I have not given up at it. Due to my attending school in the evenings it is difficult for me to join in on the teleconferences. I am a little embarrassed to leave comments on the forum due to my lack of knowledge of the business. I have a great desire to learn and be successful at this business.

Thanks,

Rosa
